

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to compositions comprising high molecular weight polymers, particularly polyethylene oxide polymers, wherein the high
5 molecular weight polymer serves as an anti-misting agent to reduce the potential of aerosol generation from a composition when used in a desired environment. The invention further relates to methods of decreasing enzyme exposure from a personal care or cleaning product comprising a high molecular weight polymer.